METANeconomics

Case Study

This app was designed for B.T.S. Italia GmbH as an easy and quick way to fill in a specific document. This application is able to fill in the document on the basis of the information entered by the user.

Customer: ACS Data Systems AG/SPA

Project: METANeconomics

Type: Mobile development

Requirements: The application provides the ability to automatically fill in a pdf document with a large number of fields, to sign it, as well as to send the completed document by e-mail, and save information to the data store. It is also possible to change the language of the application without leaving it.

Challenge: The main challenge for our developers was to fill in the fields in the existing pdf document.

Solution: Our team has solved the problem of filling in the fields by superposition of a new layer onto the existing document layer.

Results: The development project outcome is an application for the iPad. The app has six pages. All pages contain fields, switches and checkboxes. There are also five buttons on the navigation bar (please see the screenshots below):

1. The first button lets you change the language of the application without leaving it.
2. The second button is used for sending an e-mail with the attached document.
3. Clear button. All fields in the application become empty.
4. Save button. It saves all data.
5. When you click on the last button, there appears a table with the stored files.
